NATIONAL DEFENSE EXECUTIVE RESERVE

At the request of the President, the Defense Production Act was amended in 1955 to provide for the establishment of the National Defense Executive Reserve as part of the Nation's mobilization readiness program. This Reserve is designed to make immediately available to the government in an emergency persons with broad experience in functional areas of interest to the defense agencies. Since authorization of the Reserve, fifteen departments and agencies of the Federal government have established Executive Reserve units which have a membership of approximately 1500 persons.

Executive Order 10660 of 15 February 1956 and Defense Mobilization Order 1-21 of 23 February 1956 established the program in the Executive Branch of the government. On 24 February 1956 the Director of Office of Defense Mobilization invited the Director of Central Intelligence to participate in the program. Membership in the Central Intelligence Agency unit of the National Defense Executive Reserve is by invitation from the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence. All Reservists are cleared for security and are registered for the Agency in the Central Record maintained by the Civil Service Commission for the government as a whole.

Biographical sketches of the Executive Reservists are contained in this directory. These individuals have signed statements of understanding which indicate their intention to serve with the Agency in event of general emergency. They would, of course, serve in a civilian capacity.
